

College shows marked progress

STUDENTS at King's College in Wellard are reaping the benefits of two Federal Government grants.

Formerly known as El Shaddai College, Kings College received the grants on November 2.

The grants funded the development of a science and home economics class and the provision of carpets and computers for the computer lab.

Following the handover of the grants from Senator Mathias Cormann an open day was held, led by students, showcasing the new facilities.

King's College is also expanding its early learning centre which is set to be completed by Term 1, 2008.

The expansion will include an increase in the playground area, new playground equipment and facilities, trampolines, and touch-screen technology for Kindergarten and pre-primary students.

Kings College students Brianna Conti-Nibaldi, Rachel Pearson and Madison Hislop make the most of the new computers.
